AMERICANS ARE RELEASED AFTER 26-DAY ABSENCE

Captain And Lieutenant Held As Spies By Soviets At Potsdam

BERLIN, July 31—Two American officers released by the Red army during the night after a 26-day disappearance in the Soviet zone said today they had been held as hostages at Potsdam by the Russians and charged with being spies.

The two officers, Capt. Harold Cobin of Newark, N. J. and Lieut. George Wyatt of Oklahoma City, told the story of their disappearance to a press conference 12 hours after their release.

Cobin and Wyatt were turned over to the American provost marshal shortly before midnight in Russian headquarters. They had been missing since July 4. Both were well shaved when released, but appeared tired and disheveled.

The two American officers said they were arrested by the Russians at Oranienburg after falling in an attempt to enter the Sachsenhausen concentration camp.

Cobin and Wyatt said they peeked through a crack in the Russian army truck which was their "patrol wagon" and knew immediately that they were being taken to Potsdam. They said they were confined in a house at Potsdam and were not allowed to see each other.

Both said they were well-treated and that the food was adequate, but unappetizing.

"We got German economy food," Cobin said. "Thirty per cent macaroni, 30 percent potatoes, and 30 per cent black bread. The same thing three times daily. We were quizzed long and frequently by the army and secret police."

1,000 RESCUED FROM BLAZING TRANSPORT SHIP

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 31—An estimated 1,000 passengers were removed safely today from the Brazilian transport ship Duquesa after it caught on fire off Cape Frio.

Late morning advices from the burning ship said the removal of passengers to a rescue ship was complete and the fire had been brought under control, with some 500 crewmen remaining aboard.

The Duquesa, a 16,000-ton ship, served as a troop transport throughout the war. She left Rio de Janeiro at 10 p. m. Tuesday for Lisbon and Naples to pick up immigrants.

The British merchantman Dover Hill took off the approximately 1,000 passengers. Five Brazilian warships were standing by to aid in fighting the fire. The ship was expected to be towed back to Rio de Janeiro for the final fight against the fire if it proves stubborn.

Tentative reports said nothing of any casualties. Details of the extent of the fire were lacking.

Russia Gains Most By Axis Satellite Treaties

PARIS, July 31—The price of defeat for Germany's five satellite states is more than $1,000,000,000 in reparations and reduction to military impotence.

Peace treaties drafted by the big four, now under review by the peace conference, will strip the defeated countries of all but token armed forces, take large territories from them and impose strict economic control.

The treaty drafts, published last night, are full of holes showing disagreements among the big four. Nevertheless, the agreed portions disclose the extreme cost of losing a war.

Italy in particular considered the terms excessively harsh. Her diplomats who came here seeking easier terms were bitter. They said the proposed treaty will cost Italy 666,000,000,000 lire she had not expected to pay.

"Our 20-month of co-belligerency went for nothing," one high Italian diplomat said. "It is most difficult from reading the treaty to understand just how the treaty could have been more stringent if Italy had never fought the Germans."

Russia is by far the greatest beneficiary of the reparations demands. She will receive $900,000,000 in goods and services from Italy, Romania, Hungary and Finland. Bulgaria's payment remains to be fixed by the peace conference.

The Italian treaty draft is the

'HUSBAND' SAYS LOLA CELLI IS LIVING IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, July 31—Felice Celli, brother of missing Lola Celli, admitted here today that an anonymous telephone call in which the former school teacher was reported married and living in a nearby town might be correct.

He said he knew of no way in which the call, made to a Columbus newspaper, could be checked. Many calls, a large number of them obviously by "cranks," had been received since the girl disappeared Feb. 23.

The caller was quoted as saying he was the husband of the Celli girl, and that she was expecting the birth of a child. The news account said he claimed to have called the Celli family several times.

Questioned on that, the brother said "That may be true."

The Celli girl, a teacher at West Mansfield, O., disappeared during a holiday visit with her parents. She was last seen shortly after she left her suburban Grandview home to board a bus for downtown Columbus.

COTTON CLOTHES PRICE TO JUMP TEN PER CENT

Decontrol Board To Decide Whether Grain To Remain Without Controls

WASHINGTON, July 31—Prices on all types of cotton clothing soon are expected to jump 10 per cent with additional increases tagging along within the next few months, OPA officials disclosed today.

Higher retail costs on cotton clothing will result from an average 16 per cent price boost which the OPA granted cotton textile manufacturers. Although the textile price decision was reached yesterday, formal announcement has been delayed until detailed orders are drafted.

One OPA official pointed out that the textile increase was only temporary and that new price hikes on cotton textiles will follow if raw cotton prices continue upward. Raw cotton prices have increased 28 per cent in the last four months.

The cotton textile industry had asked for a 20 per cent price boost on each textile item. OPA at first offered a price increase averaging 14 per cent.

Price Administrator Paul A. Porter told cotton textile representatives late yesterday that OPA and the industry were not involved in "collective bargaining." Increases granted, he said, would be only those required by the new price control law.

OPA and the industry then agreed to the 16 per cent boost. In another action, OPA increased the price of mackinaws, leather coats, and jackets, hunting and fishing clothes and men's heavy sports shirts by 8 per cent. The increases were granted under the old price control law and acknowledged higher costs for labor and materials.

CONGRESS WILL LET MILITARY PROPOSALS DIE

WASHINGTON, July 31—A vacation-bound congress is cold-shouldering three administration bills to provide American military collaboration with foreign nations, and it seems certain they will go on the legislative scrap heap—for this year at least.

The bills would:

1. Allow the United States to train, arm and equip China's military forces. Since Mme. Sun Yat-Sen charged that American arms are fostering civil strife in China, there is no chance this measure will pass at this session.

2. Permit the United States to train and equip armed force of Latin-American nations. A sudden whirlwind of objections blew up over this measure on grounds it would set up a military bloc in contravention of the spirit of the United Nations. It, too, is dead for the present.

3. Continue the President's wartime power to send military and naval missions to advise the governments of any country in the world if he considered it in the interest of national defense.

300 NEW NAMES PLACED IN JURY WHEEL HERE

Slips of paper bearing the names of 300 electors of Pickaway county were placed Wednesday in the jury wheel in the office of Clerk of Courts Arthur Wilder by the jury commissioners in the presence of Common Pleas Judge Emmet L. Crist and Clerk Wilder.

The old names were removed from the wheel and burned. The placing in the wheel of new names, taken by the commissioners from the county's poll books, is an annual procedure. The jury commissioners are W. D. Heiskell and Fred Nicholas, appointed by Judge Crist.

Medicine Is Rushed To Troop Ship

NEW YORK, July 31—One soldier has died of what is believed to be diphtheria aboard the troop transport Colby Victory en route to England, other troops are ill and show the same symptoms, and diphtheria antitoxin and toxoid are being rushed by air to the ship 500 to 600 miles off the coast of Newfoundland.

The Coast Guard, flying a relay of mercy planes to the vessel, said the Army port surgeon had received a message from the ship's doctor at 10 p. m. last night which said:

"Urgent. Death one soldier. Strongly indicative of diphtheria. Autopsy being performed. Report of death to follow completion of autopsy. Other patients showing similar symptoms."

Police reported that a further message received by the port surgeon at 5 a. m. said "patients showing further symptoms."

The surgeon's office said, however, that a definite diagnosis of diphtheria had not been made.

LIQUOR AGENTS TO CRACK DOWN

Reassignment Of Most Heads Made In Effort To Improve Setup

COLUMBUS, O., July 31—District enforcement agents-in-charge of the state department of liquor control today had their orders to "crackdown" on all forms of liquor law violations in their jurisdiction.

State Liquor Director Robert M. Sohngen announced re-assignment of virtually every agent-in-charge to new districts and told the men that slot machines in liquor places "must go."

He also told his agents that they should investigate any report of attempts to "shakedown" tavern keepers for political purposes. Sohngen ordered that there be no letup in enforcement of all liquor laws.

New assignments announced by Sohngen, effective Aug. 1, were: O. J. Kline of Portsmouth to the Toledo district; Owen T. Conway of Toledo to Sandusky; Robert Coffey of Sandusky to Canton; Lou Pickrel of Dayton to Cincinnati; William Hopper of Cincinnati to Portsmouth; Ralph Kittle of Akron to Dayton; Maynard Kimball of Cleveland to Akron, and Charles Bringman, administrative (Continued on Page Two)

State To Proceed With Case Without Confession

CHICAGO, July 31—State's authorities said today they would proceed "in the usual way" with their case against William Heirens, 17, after the youth balked at voicing the harrowing details of the slaying of Suzanne Degnan and two other murders.

Although he is known still to be receptive to a confession, State's Attorney William J. Tuohy said he had no alternative but to "go right ahead with the case."

Despite pleas of his attorneys and his parents, the youth responded only with, "I don't know—I don't remember," when asked about the three murders and a host of other crimes.

BULLETIN

PARIS, July 31—Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov today warned the Paris peace conference that the Axis satellites must pay the price for acting as vassals of Nazi Germany in the second world war.

PARIS, July 31—V. M. Molotov of Russia, striking back at a small nations revolt against big four domination of the peace conference, charged today that proponents of a simple majority vote were trying to use trickery to secure a technical alignment of voting power.

Holland, Australia and Greece lined up in the forefront of a campaign for a simple voting majority at the peace conference, rather than a two-thirds majority by which decisions would be made.

The uprising against the big four, led by Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, occurred in the first public session of the commission on procedure.

The commission on procedure adjourned at 1:17 p. m. (7:17 a. m. EST) until 10 a. m. tomorrow, when it will begin a point by point discussion of the rules proposed by the big four.

Molotov, charging that a small-nation attempt to override the big four proposals on procedure for the peace conference was a "play on votes," added:

"A play on votes is likely to lead to deadlocks which would discredit the conference and its decisions."

Molotov said he was confident the United States, Great Britain and France would support the Russian demand for the two-thirds rule.

Replying to a fiery speech by Evatt in favor of the simple majority vote, Molotov said that only a prophet could predict that the two-thirds rule would mean inaction on proposals to change the tentative drafts of peace treaties.

No Guesswork

"We have no grounds here for engaging in such prophecies, speculation or guesswork," Molotov said.

He said the two-thirds rule would (Continued on Page Two)

DIVERS SEEKING SEVEN PERSONS IN MISSISSIPPI

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., July 31—Diving operations were continued today to recover the bodies of seven persons still missing after a collision between a Mississippi river ferry and a barge train Sunday night which took 11 lives.

Two bodies were found floating in the water 12 miles downstream yesterday at Cottonwood Point, Mo., and a third was recovered by salvage crews at the scene of the crash.

A Coast Guard board of inquiry taking testimony in the case yesterday heard the pilot of the ferry admit that he did not have a license to operate passenger craft.

Ed Hendricks, a veteran of 35 years on the river, told the board that he had a tugboat license but had never held a certificate for carrying passengers for hire.

Earl W. Rogers, Vicksburg, Miss., pilot of two tugs which were pushing a string of oil barges upstream, said he had flashed left-hand pass signals but received no response from the ferry.

Hendricks testified that he saw the signals, but too late to avoid a collision.

HOG PRICES HIT HIGH OF $24.25

New Record Set At East St.
Louis; $23.50 New Top
On Columbus Market

CHICAGO, July 31—A new U. S. record hog price was set at East St. Louis, Ill., today when a number of choice animals sold for $24.25 per hundredweight.

The previous U. S. record of $23.60 was set at Chicago in 1919. The OPA ceiling on hogs at St. Louis was $14.80.

A new local record was set at Cincinnati, where choice hogs sold for $23.50, which was 50 cents over the previous record there.

New 27-year peaks were set on hog prices at Chicago and Indianapolis. At Chicago the early top hog price was only 35 cents under the 1919 record.

The early hog trade at Indianapolis established the yard's price since 1919 when good and choice heavy hogs sold for $23.75. This was $1.25 over yesterday and $1.25 under the yard's all time high, set on one truckload of choice animals.

Hogs sold for $23.50 a hundredweight today at the Columbus Packing Co., an Armour and Co. subsidiary to set an all-time high for Columbus. The previous top was $23 set in 1919.

Hog prices continued to rise in most midwestern stockyards as receipts of the waning season dropped.

Holland, Australia and Greece lined up in the forefront of a campaign for a simple voting majority at the peace conference, rather than a two-thirds majority by which decisions would be made.

The uprising against the big four, led by Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, occurred in the first public session of the commission on procedure.

The commission on procedure adjourned at 1:17 p. m. (7:17 a. m. EST) until 10 a. m. tomorrow, when it will begin a point by point discussion of the rules proposed by the big four.

Molotov, charging that a small-nation attempt to override the big four proposals on procedure for the peace conference was a "play on votes," added:

"A play on votes is likely to lead to deadlocks which would discredit the conference and its decisions."

Molotov said he was confident the United States, Great Britain and France would support the Russian demand for the two-thirds rule.

Replying to a fiery speech by Evatt in favor of the simple majority vote, Molotov said that only a prophet could predict that the two-thirds rule would mean inaction on proposals to change the tentative drafts of peace treaties.

No Guesswork

"We have no grounds here for engaging in such prophecies, speculation or guesswork," Molotov said.

He said the two-thirds rule would (Continued on Page Two)

DIVERS SEEKING SEVEN PERSONS IN MISSISSIPPI

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., July 31—Diving operations were continued today to recover the bodies of seven persons still missing after a collision between a Mississippi river ferry and a barge train Sunday night which took 11 lives.

Two bodies were found floating in the water 12 miles downstream yesterday at Cottonwood Point, Mo., and a third was recovered by salvage crews at the scene of the crash.

A Coast Guard board of inquiry taking testimony in the case yesterday heard the pilot of the ferry admit that he did not have a license to operate passenger craft.

Ed Hendricks, a veteran of 35 years on the river, told the board that he had a tugboat license but had never held a certificate for carrying passengers for hire.

Earl W. Rogers, Vicksburg, Miss., pilot of two tugs which were pushing a string of oil barges upstream, said he had flashed left-hand pass signals but received no response from the ferry.

Hendricks testified that he saw the signals, but too late to avoid a collision.

RUSSIAN SAYS SMALL NATIONS USE TRICKERY

carry greater weight than a majority rule. He said:
"It is strange indeed to hear someone try to prove that an 11 to 10 decision is better than a 14 to 7 decision. What we ought to bear in mind is this—we must face the facts boldly and use to our best to prevent the use of certain tricks which are known as play on votes."

Speaking for half an hour after representatives of the smaller nations had had their say, Molotov declared that the conference should assure its authority and prestige by preventing the alignment of 12 countries against seven or eight.

Referring to comment by Evatt regarding "two thirds or three fifths majority," Molotov, who evidently thought Evatt was proposing the latter, said:

"It is felt that he who makes such a suggestion must be well versed in his calculations."

Quotes French
He quoted from a dispatch in the socialist organ Populaire, which he said was representative of French public opinion. It said that if a simple majority became the rule, the "Anglo-Saxon bloc" could be sure of mustering 12 or 13 votes and Russia "could rest assured it would always find itself in the minority." Returning to the attack on Evatt, Molotov continued:

"I do not know what Mr. Evatt had in mind when he suggested a simple majority. If one speaks of three fifths or any other proportion, then he would seem to have in mind a certain number of other interested states."

"This would not be in the interests of the conference but would be prompted by the interests of groups. We should be concerned about how the conference can best promote the establishment of peace and therefore I think we are bound to give careful consideration to suggestions made by the council of foreign ministers."

Dutch Open Drive
The Dutch were the first to be heard in the fight for a simple majority rule. Baron Van Botzelaar accused the big powers of seizing all authority.

Evatt followed, his voice becoming louder and louder as he discussed the procedure which was "very important to me." He apologized at the end for speaking so long, but explained:

"I want to make clear the attitude I take right at the start, and I want the other delegates to have a suitable opportunity to reflect on and consider these vital issues."

Premier Constantin Tsaldaris of Greece said emphatically that his country associated itself fully with Holland on the voting issue. He said it should be the privilege of each delegation to bring up not only questions which had been submitted previously to the foreign ministers council, but any others they regarded as important to a lasting peace.

Yugoslavs Want Veto
Before the debate over the voting margin began, Yugoslavia tried to get a peace conference seat for Albania, and proposed a rule which in effect would give the Yugoslavs veto power over any decision on Trieste. The Yugoslav spokesman was Moshia Pijade, vice president of the Yugoslav presidium.

He urged Albania's inclusion as the 22nd conference member as "a matter of honor." He said Yugoslavia speaks as the country "most directly interested in three of the five treaties."

The Yugoslav procedural proposal put forward by Kardelj was an amendment to the two-thirds rule proposed by the big four. Kardelj's amendment proposed that no boundary decisions involving ethnic principles would be taken even by a two-thirds majority unless the party directly interested consented.

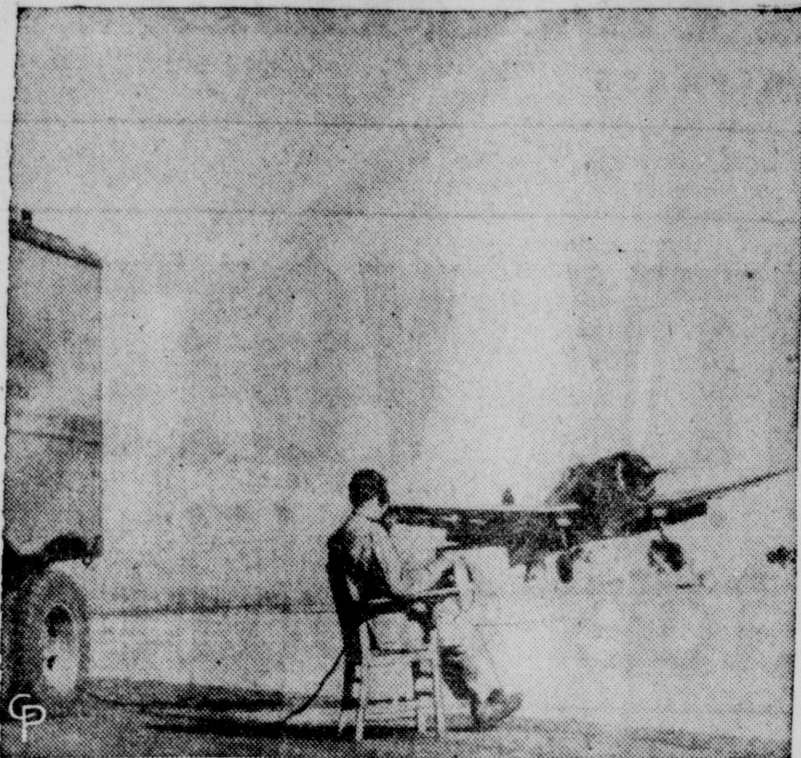

Thus Yugoslavia, by refusing to consent, could veto any conference recommendation on Trieste and the Italian-Yugoslav frontier.

Admission of Albania would increase the "Soviet bloc" in the conference.

HUSBANDS ASK DIVORCES IN SUITS FILED HERE

Two husbands seek divorces in suits filed Wednesday in Pickaway County Common Pleas court.

Edwin M. Plum, 461 North Court street, accuses Mrs. Dorothy A. Plum, 130 North Pickaway street, of gross neglect of duty. He says they were married Dec. 28, 1940 in Circleville and that they are childless. Plum recites that he entered the Army six weeks after the marriage, that he served with the 37th Division, and that he was discharged Sept. 13, 1945. Since then, he contends, his wife has refused to live with him and that she insists upon remaining in the home of her parents.

Clyde Worthington, Ashville, charges Mrs. Opal Worthington, Ashville, with gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty, but his petition contains no details of the accusation. He says they were married May 19, 1935 at Portsmouth. Worthington also asks for the custody of a 4-year-old son, Crawford Leon.

after 16 days in Potsdam," Cobin said.

Cobin, who speaks Russian fluently, said he was questioned at length concerning the connection between the commander of the documents center, Lt. Col. Hans W. Hegm, and Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay.

Cobin and Wyatt said they saw each other last night for the first time since their arrest. They said they entered the Russian zone on a sight-seeing tour.

Cobin said the Russians apparently were trying to establish "a chain of command linking the documents with General Clay."

Both officers appeared none the worse for their ordeal and talked freely to newsmen during a 90-minute press conference.

An official announcement said Maj. Gen. Frank A. Keating, American military governor in Berlin, was investigating the entire incident.

Well-informed American officials said both Cobin and Wyatt would face courts martial for their unauthorized trip into the Russian zone.

The American officers said Soviet questioners disclosed that they were being held because "Russian officers" had been arrested by U. S. military officials on charges of espionage. (U. S. officials seized two Russian officers June 14 and held them in custody for 32 days before releasing them.)

GIRL, 18, TO BE QUESTIONED IN ENSLOW DEATH

COLUMBUS, July 31—An 18-year old Columbus girl who claimed she gave Daniel Enslow, 16, the poisoned candy bar that preceded his drowning, today was turned over by the Bureau of Juvenile Research to Franklin county officials for questioning.

The girl, whose name was withheld, was brought to the BJR earlier this year from the Girls' Industrial School at Delaware.

Her story contradicted that of Warren Rose, 15, of Columbus, who was bound over to the grand jury after he admitted that he gave Enslow the candy, then rolled his apparently dead body into a gravel pit filled with water.

Earlier today Franklin county coroner John B. Gravis returned a verdict of drowning while under the effects of poisoning in Enslow's death. The 16-year old Rudolph, O., boy and Rose were fugitives from the BJR.

Dr. Gravis was expected to confer with assistant county prosecutor T. Vincent Martin today to determine whether exhumation of the body, buried at Fremont, would be necessary.

THREE MARINES SAID KILLED IN CHINA AMBUSH

PEIPING, July 31—U. S. Marine headquarters announced officially today that three Marines were killed and 12 others wounded, four critically, when a Marine truck convoy was ambushed Monday between Tientsin and Peiping.

The convoy was attacked by 300 armed Chinese who used hand grenades and automatic weapons against the 100 Marines. A four-hour battle ensued during which both sides suffered casualties.

First reports identified the attackers as Chinese Communists, but Communist headquarters at Peiping issued an official denial and said an investigation would be welcomed.

Nationalist quarters, however, blamed the Communists for the delay in sending a three-man field team to the area for the purpose of fixing responsibility for the incident. Field teams are composed of one Nationalist, one Communist, and one American.

Brig. Gen. William A. Worton, Marine chief of staff for China, said yesterday that the convoy was attacked by "unidentified armed Chinese," but made no further identification.

Declaring that they are joint equal owners of the farm, Mrs. McPherson claims her brother has appropriated to his own use all rents and other profits from the property during the past 17 years. She says they inherited the property from their mother, Mrs. Mary L. Green, that their father, George L. Green survived their mother but that he died intestate Jan. 14, 1929 and that their brother, Leslie L. Green, who inherited a one-third interest, also died intestate Oct. 9, 1943.

State To Proceed With Case Without Confession

Tuohy would demand the death penalty.

Although yesterday's conference fell flat, the door was left open for a confession at a later date in the event Heirens changes his mind.

Defense Attorney John P. Coghlan said that Heirens' condition was such "that we regard it inadvisable to proceed." However, he added, "that statement goes for the present only."

Coghlan said the five defense attorneys would confer to discuss their next move but indicated they would not meet for "about a week."

Coghlan's brother, Mal, said the boy's parents were "bewildered and amazed" at his dramatic refusal to talk. "Frankly, I was amazed, too," he added.

In addition to Heirens' reported fear of divulging the grisly details of the three slayings, it was felt the youth also might have been angered over seizure of three notes which were found in his jail cell Saturday morning. Two of the notes were to his parents and the other to a girl friend, identified only as "Joan."

When the notes were taken, Heirens was reported to have said, "unless I get my notes back, I won't cooperate."

The youth had admitted orally to his parents and defense attorneys the Degan slaying and the murders of ex-WAVE Frances Brown and Mrs. Josephine Ross, a housewife.

One attorney, asked about the admissions, said:
"They made me sick to my stomach."

last night, the new decontrol board said in a statement that its members were "keenly aware of the dangers in inflation."

In reaching decisions to recontrol or decontrol products, it promised to give "full and impartial consideration to all the facts."

Board members are Chairman Roy L. Thompson, New Orleans; George M. Mead, Dayton, O.; and Daniel W. Bell, Washington, D. C. One of the first jobs of the board will be to determine whether grain is to remain free of price controls. Unless the board rules otherwise, grain, meat, and dairy products will return to price controls automatically on Aug. 21.

OFA officials frankly admit that it will be extremely difficult to hold effective price ceilings on bread, flour, cereals, and other grain products.

A price increase on cereals will be announced shortly, an OPA spokesman said. The increase was pending when price controls lapsed June 30. It expected to cover all cereals except corn flakes, puffed wheat and puffed rice. Increases on those cereals already have been granted.

The subsidies on coffee, flour, and processed vegetables are not expected to be restored under the new price control bill. This will mean higher prices on these items, including canned peas, corn and tomatoes.

The announcement on the coffee price increase has been held up, a spokesman said, until it is determined whether advances which occurred during the suspension of price controls should be allowed to stand. If they are, the retail price increase will be around ten cents a pound instead of the originally contemplated six or seven cents, he said.

RUSSIAN SAYS SMALL NATIONS USE TRICKERY

Speaking for half an hour after representatives of the smaller nations had had their say, Molotov declared that the conference should assure its authority and prestige by preventing the alignment of 12 countries against seven or eight.

Referring to comment by Evatt regarding "two thirds or three fifths majority," Molotov, who evidently thought Evatt was proposing the latter, said:

"It is felt that he who makes such a suggestion must be well versed in his calculations."

He quoted from a dispatch in the socialist organ Populaire, which he said was representative of French public opinion. It said that if a simple majority became the rule, the "Anglo-Saxon bloc" could be sure of mustering 12 or 13 votes and Russia "could rest assured it would always find itself in the minority." Returning to the attack on Evatt, Molotov continued:

"This would not be in the interests of the conference but would be prompted by the interests of groups. Dutch Open Drive

The Dutch were the first to be heard in the fight for a simple majority rule. Baron Van Botzeler accused the big powers of seizing all authority.

Before the debate over the voting margin began, Yugoslavia tried to get a peace conference seat for Albania, and proposed a rule which in effect would give the Yugoslavs veto power over any decision on Trieste. The Yugoslav spokesman was Mosha Pijade, vice president of the Yugoslav presidium.

He urged Albania's inclusion as the 22nd conference member as "a matter of honor." He said Yugoslavia speaks as the country "most directly interested in three of the five treaties."

The Yugoslav procedural proposal put forward by Kardelj was an amendment to the two-thirds rule proposed by the big four. Kardelj's amendment proposed that no boundary decisions involving ethnic principles would be taken even by a two-thirds majority unless the party directly interested consented.

Thus Yugoslavia, by refusing to consent, could veto any conference recommendation on Trieste and the Italian-Yugoslav frontier.

Admission of Albania would increase the "Soviet bloc" in the conference.

THREE MARINES SAID KILLED IN CHINA AMBUSH

PEIPING, July 31—U. S. Marine headquarters announced officially today that three Marines were killed and 12 others wounded, four critically, when a Marine truck convoy was ambushed Monday between Tientsin and Peiping.

The convoy was attacked by 300 armed Chinese who used hand grenades and automatic weapons against the 100 Marines. A four-hour battle ensued during which both sides suffered casualties.

First reports identified the attackers as Chinese Communists, but Communist headquarters at Peiping issued an official denial and said an investigation would be welcomed.

Nationalist quarters, however, blamed the Communists for the delay in sending a three-man field team to the area for the purpose of fixing responsibility for the incident. Field teams are composed of one Nationalist, one Communist, and one American.

Brig. Gen. William A. Worton, Marine chief of staff for China, said yesterday that the convoy was attacked by "uniformed armed Chinese," but made no further identification.

assistant to Sohngen, to become acting chief in charge of Cleveland. Harry Cermack will act as agent-in-charge at Dayton until Kittle's suspension expires Aug. 23. Kittle was suspended for 30 days for statements he reportedly made in connection with a recent raid in Trumbull county which netted 43 slot machines in 16 liquor spots.

Harry Smith will remain as agent in charge of the Columbus district and also will become acting assistant enforcement chief under Harlan Chapman.

Sohngen said the changes in assignments were made in order to promote "maximum department efficiency."

PARTITION OF FARM ASKED BY SPRINGFIELD WOMAN

Mrs. Margaret E. McPherson, Springfield, filed suit Wednesday in Pickaway county common pleas court against her brother, Jesse W. Green, Springfield, asking for partition of a 60-acre Monroe township farm and an accounting of the property's revenues since Jan. 14, 1929.

Declaring that they are joint equal owners of the farm, Mrs. McPherson claims her brother has appropriated to his own use all rents and other profits from the property during the past 17 years. She says they inherited the property from their mother, Mrs. Mary L. Green, that their father, George L. Green survived their mother but that he died intestate Jan. 14, 1929 and that their brother, Leslie L. Green, who inherited a one-third interest, also died intestate Oct. 9, 1943.

VET'S DEATH BREAKS TRIANGLE

SHOT by an unidentified man during a quarrel Arthur Sagart (right) 26-year-old Army veteran, lies dead on the front seat of his car in Chicago. Police declared they were seeking for questioning the estranged husband of Betty Fairfax (left), 22-year-old mother of two children, whom Sagart is said to have been courting. State To Proceed With Case Without Confession

Tuohy would demand the death penalty.

Although yesterday's conference fell flat, the door was left open for a confession at a later date in the event Heirens changes his mind.

Defense Attorney John P. Coghlan said that Heirens' condition was such "that we regard it inadvisable to proceed." However, he added, "that statement goes for the present only."

Coghlan said the five defense attorneys would confer to discuss their next move but indicated they would not meet for "about a week."

Coghlan's brother, Mal, said the boy's parents were "bewildered and amazed" at his dramatic refusal to talk. "Frankly, I was amazed, too," he added.

In addition to Heirens' reported fear of divulging the grisly details of the three slayings, it was felt the youth also might have been angered over seizure of three notes which were found in his jail cell Saturday morning. Two of the notes were to his parents and the other to a girl friend, identified only as "Joan."

When the notes were taken, Heirens was reported to have said, "unless I get my notes back, I won't cooperate."

The youth had admitted orally to his parents and defense attorneys the Degan slaying and the murders of ex-WAVE Frances Brown and Mrs. Josephine Ross, a housewife.

One attorney, asked about the admissions, said:

"They made me sick to my stomach."

him by Anderson. Olson lost the final election.

Olson told the committee that Anderson called him to his home last January to ask him for help from Coffee in getting a general accounting office payment on a million-dollar hospital contract.

"At this meeting at his home," Olson related, "he asked me to withdraw. He said if I would not withdraw, leaving him the only man with a Scandinavian name running in this preponderantly Scandinavian community, then he would use the check in some fashion to injure me in the March election. He attempted to blackmail me into withdrawing from the race."

"I said 'nothing doing, Elvind. There's nothing wrong with that check and you know it and I know it. If you want to use it, go ahead.'"

Coffee testified yesterday that he used the $2,500 check from Anderson to recoup campaign expenditures in the 1938 campaign. He did not list it on his income tax returns because he regarded it as a gift. He did not list it as a campaign contribution because it came in a non-election year.

Coffee now was relying on a high justice department official to clear him of Anderson's charges that the check had been a fee for Washington representation involving the hospital contract.

COTTON CLOTHES PRICE TO JUMP TEN PER CENT

last night, the new decontrol board said in a statement that its members were "keenly aware of the dangers in inflation." In reaching decisions to recontrol or decontrol products, it promised to give "full and impartial consideration to all the facts."

Board members are Chairman Roy L. Thompson, New Orleans; George M. Mead, Dayton, O.; and Daniel W. Bell, Washington, D. C.

One of the first jobs of the board will be to determine whether grain is to remain free of price controls. Unless the board rules otherwise, grain, meat, and dairy products will return to price controls automatically on Aug. 21.

OPA officials frankly admit that if grain prices remain uncontrolled it will be extremely difficult to hold effective price ceilings on bread, flour, cereals, and other grain products.

A price increase on cereals will be announced shortly, an OPA spokesman said. The increase was pending when price controls lapsed June 30. It expected to cover all cereals except corn flakes, puffed wheat and puffed rice. Increases on those cereals already have been granted.

The subsidies on coffee, flour, and processed vegetables are not expected to be restored under the new price control bill. This will mean higher prices on these items, including canned peas, corn and tomatoes.

The announcement on the coffee price increase has been held up, a spokesman said, until it is determined whether advances which occurred during the suspension of price controls should be allowed to stand. If they are, the retail price increase will be around ten cents a pound instead of the originally contemplated six or seven cents, he said.

17 BID ON LINES

WASHINGTON, July 31—The war assets administration today opened 17 bids to buy or lease the Big Inch and Little Inch pipelines built by the government during the war at a cost of $145,000,000.

It is estimated about 17 1/2 million acres of small grain and flax will be harvested in North Dakota during August and September. Of this acreage about 10 1/2 million acres are wheat.

BUCK OWENS TO BRING CIRCUS HERE SATURDAY

Combined Wild West Show And Circus To Be Seen On South Court Street

Saturday is Circus Day in Circleville and Buck Owens will make his first appearance here. Buck has starred in dozens of Westerns before entering the Army but this is his first circus year.

Buck is a native son of Ohio, having been born and reared in Sandusky and the Ohio towns are giving him a warm welcome. He has brought his entire "gang" of cowgirls and cowboys from Hollywood and the Buck Owens Circus and Wild West is the only traveling organization which includes a complete rodeo and circus under one mammoth "big top".

Buck does most of his own announcing and with his screen experience he clearly expresses the warmth he feels for his boys. Leon Snyder an expert roper, who taught many of the Australian boys to use the rope instead of the bull whip for which the Australians are noted, is perhaps the best in the country today. But it is for Joe Cwirka, a young lad who lost his right leg during the battle of Okinawa, that Buck goes "all out". Joe is a splendid roper and rider and were not the fact mentioned one would not know he had lost a leg. But there is a special heart throb in the knowledge that even our wounded boys can become experts at the thing they love best.

Buck in rounding out his circus program selected the artists in their particular line. The Great Felix Morales of Mexico City whose family for generations have been topnotchers, brings his troupe for their trampoline. Felix Jr. and Elizabeth, the young son and daughter contribute a great deal to the act. Joe and his wife Anna and the real thrill is experienced when Felix slides down the single strand of wire from the top of the huge tent while standing on his head.

Helene D'Orsila heads the Hollywood Air Ballet, a dance in the air that is a delight of symmetry and beauty. John F. Dusch is the band leader and every circus fan knows that there must be a band, with the callopie and real circus music with its ever changing tempo.

Altogether it is a big show with a variety of entertainment for all. There will be two performances Saturday, August 3rd, at the South Court St. Circus Lot, the matinee at three and the evening show at eight o'clock.

JAYCEES URGE SAVING OF ALL WASTE PAPER

City-Wide Collection To Be Staged Here Wednesday
August 14

Householders and merchants in Circleville were urged Wednesday to save all castoff paper and to contribute it to the one-day city-wide waste paper collection which is to be staged Aug. 14.

Spokesmen for the Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the waste paper campaign, emphasized the postwar need for paper. They said that funds derived from the paper collection will be used for the financing of several worthwhile projects in Circleville which are backed by the Junior Chamber in its program of community service.

The waste paper campaign has the endorsement of the United States Chamber of Commerce, whose president, William K. Jackson, said that "in continuance of the nation's wartime salvage effort lies one of the great factors in our passing the test of reconversion."

Reviewing a recent report by J. D. Small, civilian production administrator who called upon the boxboard industry for greater production particularly in items used for construction, Jackson asserted that "such demands upon this industry can only be fulfilled if each householder and merchant will continue to salvage waste paper."

Junior Chamber officials have asked all Circleville residents to save and contribute to the waste paper drive all newspapers, magazines, books, corrugated and cardboard boxes and cartons, and all wastebasket papers such as envelopes, wrappers, etc. They have been asked to tie the paper in neat bundles to facilitate its quick pick-up by the collectors Aug. 14.

Emphasizing the continued need for waste paper the Junior Chamber officials pointed out that early in World War II the nation's pulpwood production was crippled by loss of labor in the woods. This caused the industry to dip heavily into the waste paper pool, which itself declined because millions of tons of paper and paperboard products went overseas, never returning for converting.

To help meet the crisis of military demands upon the industry for front-line supplies such as K-ration boxes, shell containers, and 700,000 other items, the nation became waste paper conscious overnight.

Now that the war has ended, the normal expansion of the nation's industry, as in all postwar periods, will eventually exceed wartime production levels. A vital link in passing the country's needs from maker to consumer lies in the supply of boxboard. In order to supply the demand for boxboard, waste-paper receipts at the mills must be sustained at war levels and increased by at least 2-million tons a year.

The source of this much needed waste-paper lies in the home and plant and must be salvaged by systematic collections. In thirteen midwest states, the waste-paper consuming industry is engaged in a program to effect such a salvage.

SECOND VETERAN CLINIC PLANNED THIS WEEKEND

The next in the series of monthly clinics to provide free osteopathic examination and treatment for World War II veterans in Ohio who have service-connected structural disabilities will be held at Doctors Hospital, 1087 Dennison Avenue, Columbus, Ohio on Friday and Saturday.

Such veterans' clinics will be established in the out-patient departments of certain approved hospitals designated by the Veterans' Clinic Committee of the Ohio Osteopathic Association of Physicians and Surgeons which is the sponsoring association for the clinics.

The various veterans' organizations and the Red Cross have been designated as certifying agencies in determining the probable service-connection of the disability. A veteran desiring examination and treatment at one of the clinics first must obtain certification from the service officer of one of these agencies.

Hospitals participating in the program will furnish X-ray and clinical laboratory facilities without charge. Osteopathic physicians serving in the clinics and later as attending physicians in the veterans' home towns will donate their time and services. Veterans, however, must arrange for their own transportation, lodging and meals while attending a clinic.

Clinical examinations and treatment will include internal medicine, eye, ear, nose and throat, orthopedic and osteopathic diagnosis.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Do You Know About Bulbous Irises?

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

BULBOUS IRIS are grown from small pointed bulbs, which resemble those of tulips. If you don't know about them it will pay you to become acquainted with them.

The foliage is slender, and in early spring and late fall it has the appearance of tall, coarse grass. Bulbous irises grow from 12 to 24 inches high.

The most popular bulbous iris for garden use are Reticula, Dutch, Spanish and English. The flowers of each of these varieties are exquisitely graceful in form and colorful. The flower of the English variety is illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

Bulbous iris like a sandy soil, although they grow well in any moderately fertile soil. Their one prime requirement is good drainage. They also enjoy full sun.

The bulbs are dug in summer and planted in the fall, September or October, according to your location. They begin to grow immediately, sending up grass-like shoots which remain green over winter.

Plant the bulbs 8 to 12 inches apart, and about 4 inches deep, as illustrated. In northern states they should be protected by a mulch of straw.

After the bulbs have flowered in early summer and the foliage has withered, as illustrated, they can be dug up much the same way one would dig tulip bulbs. In most localities this is the time to dig up the iris bulbs.

It is important that the foliage be permitted to have ample sun when it is ripening off. Heel them in a sunny location for this purpose. When the foliage is sufficiently yellowed, the bulbs can be stored dry for the remainder of the summer, ready for fall planting.

STANKY IS HERO AS DODGER NINE EDGES CARDS 2-1

Red Sox Stretch Lead To 12½ Games At Cleveland; Rowe Beats Reds

NEW YORK, July 31—Leo Durocher, orating to any one who would volunteer to listen was discussing one of his Dodgers.

"He can't hit, he can't run, he isn't a sure fielder—but he's the best darned player on this club," he said.

That's pesky Eddie Stanky—today's hero in Flatbush.

Stanky beat the Cardinals last night, 2 to 1, giving Brooklyn a vital opening victory in the big three game series with the Cardinals, which boosted the Dodgers first place margin to 3½ games.

The hard-losing little second baseman from Mobile, Ala., who has a fancy ball players' vocabulary but can't even pronounce the word defeat, played exactly according to Durocher's description of him. He got no hits, he didn't run sensationally and he was no whizz-ah—until the ninth.

Then came a clutch play he had to make, one of those impossible stops that live long in the memory of the fans who saw it, and he made it. The Dodgers were ahead 2 to 1 but Stan Musial had gotten on via an error and George Kuroski had coaxed a walk which sent starter Rube Melton out of the game.

Harry (Little Dixie) Walker greeted relief pitcher Hank Behrman with a scorching bouncer that went straight over second, looking like a sure two-base hit until Stanky intercepted it with a desperate lunge and forced Kuroski at second. That ended the Cardinal threat and sent Howie Pollet down to his first defeat of the year against Brooklyn and his fifth loss against 12 victories.

Melton, who was started on a gamble by Durocher, pitched his best game in years for his first victory since returning from military service, giving up four hits compared with the five Pollet yielded.

The Cards took a short-lived lead in the seventh on Musial's double and rookie Joe Garagiola's sharp single. The Dodgers went ahead to stay in their half when Pee Wee Reese tripled, Dixie Walker singled and rookie Carl Furillo doubled.

The Red Sox took a 12½ lead, their widest to date, as Dave (Boo) Ferriss pitched the American League runaways to a three-hit, 4 to 0 victory at Cleveland for his sixth shutout and his 17th decision. Ted Williams scored his 100th run on his 28th homer and Rip Russell also homered to give Ferriss the batting support he needed. The Shaw, Miss, youngster struck out three and didn't walk a batter.

Detroit cut the lead of the dispirited second place Yankees to a single game, winning a close 6 to 5 decision despite three New York homers by Tommy Henrich, Charley Keller and Aaron Robinson. Virgil Trucks squelched a Yankee threat in the ninth a run short of a tie for his 12th victory. He struck out 13 batters.

Jeff Heath's three-run homer climaxed a wild 11th inning at St. Louis in which the Browns topped the Senators, 6 to 3. Washington broke a 2-all tie with a run in the 11th and St. Louis tied it at 3-all before Heath delivered his game-winning smash. Vern Stephens and Chet Laabs also hit Brown homers.

The Athletics put on one of their rare hitting displays to top the White Sox, 9 to 2 at Chicago. Sam Chapman hit a three run homer in a big six run seventh inning. The A's made 14 hits.

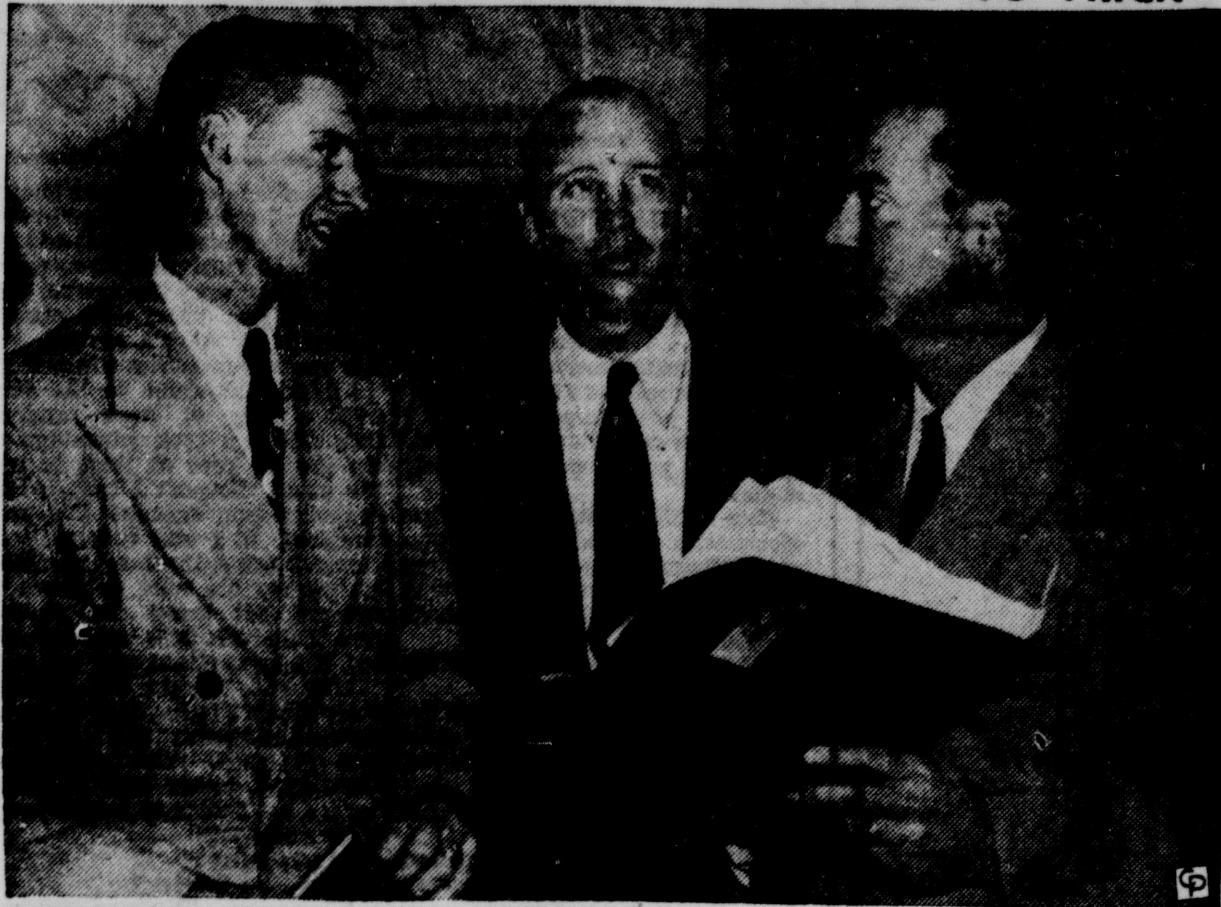

The Giants evened the count in their hard-fought series with the Cubs at New York, winning 3 to 2 in the ninth when Johnny Mize doubled and Goodwin Rosen punched a single past first base for the deciding run off Bill Chipman, the relief hurler who had beaten them in 11 innings on Monday.

Lyn Rowe, one of the great comeback stars of 1946, scored his 11th victory and his fourth in a row for the Phils by beating Cincinnati, 8 to 4 at Philadelphia. In order to win he had to stop the six-game victory streak of another comeback star, lefty Johnny VanderMeer. Catcher Andy Seminick with three singles and a three run homer was the Phils' batting star.

Pittsburgh at Boston was rained out.

DETROIT MAY GET TITLE BOUT

Jacobs Seeking Permission From Louis, Mauriello To Shift Fight

NEW YORK, July 31—Promoter Mike Jacobs awaited word from Champion Joe Louis and challenger Tami Mauriello today on a proposal to shift the scene of their forthcoming heavyweight title bout from New York's Yankee stadium to a site in Detroit.

Jacobs said boxing commissioner John Hettche of Michigan called him asking that the fight be shifted to Detroit, home town of Louis, for a night sometime in September.

He told Hettche that since both fighters were signed for the Sept. 18 appearance here, he would have to get their consent before he could give any definite answer.

It was pointed out that such a transfer would relieve Jacobs of the pressure of title fights crowding the September calendar for New York. In addition to the scheduled Louis-Mauriello match, welterweight champion Marty Servo meets Sugar Ray Robinson on Sept. 6 and middle-weight title holder Tony Zale opposes Rocky Graziano on Sept. 27.

Mauriello, now in preliminary training at Neptune, N. J., was expected to give his decision shortly and Louis will be contacted as soon as he arrives in New York late this week to open a new Harlem restaurant, Jacobs said.

If the bout is held in Detroit it will be only the third time in his many title defenses that Louis has fought in his home town since taking over the crown. He won from Bob Pastor there in 1939 and from Abe Simon in 1941.

DODGERS OVER MILLION MARK IN ATTENDANCE

NEW YORK, July 31—The Brooklyn Dodgers, with 32 more home games to go, were already past the million mark in attendance today and appeared virtually certain to break the all-time season mark of 1,214,910 for Ebbets Field set when they won the pennant in 1941.

The Dodgers, third major league club to go over a million, came through last night when a capacity crowd of 31,446 saw them defeat the second place Cardinals, 2 to 1. That brought the season total to 1,022,400 for 45 games to date.

It was the sixth time that the Dodgers with one of the smallest parks in the majors had hit the million mark for a season. They have averaged better than 20,000 fans per game to date and need only a 7,000 average here out to top the 1941 level.

COUNTER DOUBLE CROSS CHARGED ON RACE TRACK

MIAMI, Fla., July 31—A "counter-double cross" in an allegedly fixed horse race at Tropical Park last April 17 left turf fans wondering today just who got hurt.

Three jockeys, charged with "conniving and conspiring" to fix the horse race, were suspended—perhaps permanently—from the Florida turf despite the fact that one of them, Robert Keane, insisted that he went honest at the last minute and rode his mount to victory.

The horse, Old Mexico, paid off a fat $21.50 to win, whereas the horse which allegedly was supposed to have won, Lady Cavite, would have paid but $10 had the plot worked.

The complaint against the riders was made by John Madala of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective association, who appeared before the state racing commission to present evidence yesterday.

The commission ordered the jockeys, Keane, Leonard Loveridge, and Vincent Nodarse to appear for a hearing on Sept. 17 and show cause why they should not be ruled off the turf permanently in Florida.

James Marcum, a jockey valet, was cited by Madala as the go-between in the attempted "fix" which backfired when Keane brought in Old Mexico some four lengths ahead of Lady Cavite, ridden by Nodarse.

OUT OF CIRCULATION

INDIANAPOLIS—Indianapolis Judge John Niblack leaned over his high court bench, looked carefully at an alleged drunk, and said: "You haven't missed a month being arrested this year, have you?"

The defendant said nothing. "180 days on the state farm, $50 and costs," the judge said. "I'm going to keep you out of court for a while."

Explorers have found some 500 ruins of ancient Indian pueblos on the south and north rims of the Grand Canyon in Arizona.

PIRATES WILL BE SOLD SOON

Benswanger Admits Two Men Have Good Chance To Buy Pittsburgh Team

PITTSBURGH, July 31—The last place Pittsburgh Pirates today were expected to be sold in the near future either to Frank E. McKinney, an Indianapolis banker, or to Charles J. Margiotti, former Pennsylvania attorney general.

President William Benswanger, admitting that the team was on the block, said that he had discussed the sale with both men and that he had engaged in a "very serious and satisfactory conversation" with McKinney, co-owner of the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association.

"I would say that these two have equal chance of making the purchase," Benswanger said. "That does not mean, however, that there aren't others negotiating. It also doesn't mean positively that we will sell now. A telephone call, a telegram, might change the picture."

Benswanger, representing Mrs. Barney Dreyfuss and the Harris theater interests which own most of the Pirate stock, was said to be seeking better than $2,500,000 for the club.

He said that he would confer again with Margiotti, probably today, and that any offer made by him or by other prospective purchasers would be relayed to McKinney, who will be given a chance to top it. McKinney has a 24-hour option in which to make a new bid.

In New York, McKinney said that he had two conferences with the Pittsburgh stockholders and that he was returning to Indianapolis to discuss the deal with two friends, whom he did not identify. He indicated they would join him in an effort to purchase the club.

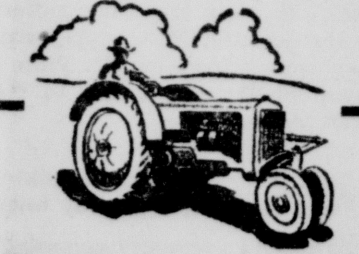

"I'll give my verdict in a week or 10 days if nothing else happens because I know there are other parties interested in the club," McKinney said.

The Pirates have been one of the big disappointments of the 1946 campaign, dropping into the National League cellar after most baseball men picked them to finish in the first division. They were the first club to be organized generally by the unaffiliated American Baseball Guild, a players' trade union, and on two occasions suffered strike threats.

STANKY IS HERO AS DODGER NINE EDGES CARDS 2-1

Red Sox Stretch Lead To 12½ Games At Cleveland; Rowe Beats Reds

NEW YORK, July 31—Leo Durocher, orating to any one who would volunteer to listen was discussing one of his Dodgers.

"He can't hit, he can't run, he isn't a sure fielder—but he's the best darned player on this club," he said.

That's the pesky Eddie Stanky—to-day's hero in Flatbush.

Stanky beat the Cardinals last night, 2 to 1, giving Brooklyn a vital opening victory in the big three game series with the Cardinals, which boosted the Dodgers first place margin to 3½ games.

The hard-losing little second baseman from Mobile, Ala., who has a fancy ball players' vocabulary but can't even pronounce the word defeat, played exactly according to Durocher's description of him. He got no hits, he didn't run sensationally and he was no whizz-afraid—until the ninth.

Then came a clutch play he had to make, one of those impossible stops that live long in the memory of the fans who saw it, and he made it. The Dodgers were ahead 2 to 1 but Stan Musial had gotten on via an error and George Kuroski had coaxed a walk which sent starter Rube Melton out of the game.

Harry (Little Dixie) Walker greeted relief pitcher Hank Behrman with a scorching bouncer that went straight over second, looking like a sure two-base hit until Stanky intercepted it with a desperate lunge and forced Kuroski at second. That ended the Cardinal threat and sent Howie Pollet down to his first defeat of the year against Brooklyn and his fifth loss against 12 victories.

Melton, who was started on a gamble by Durocher, pitched his best game in years for his first victory since returning from military service, giving up four hits compared with the five Pollet yielded.

The Cards took a short-lived lead in the seventh on Musial's double and rookie Joe Garagiola's sharp single. The Dodgers went ahead 3 to 1 in their half when Pee Wee Reese tripled, Dixie Walker singled and rookie Carl Furillo doubled.

The Red Sox took a 12½ lead, their widest to date, as Dave (Boo) Ferriss pitched the American League runaways to a three-hit, 4 to 0 victory at Cleveland for his sixth shutout and his 17th decision. Ted Williams scored his 100th run on his 28th homer and Skip Russell also homered to give Ferriss the batting support he needed. The Shaw, Missa, youngster struck out three and didn't walk a batter.

Detroit cut the lead of the dispirited second place Yankees to a single game, winning a close 5 to 3 decision despite three New York homers by Tommy Henrich, Charley Keller and Aaron Robinson. Virgil Trucks squelched a Yankee threat in the ninth a run short of a tie for his 12th victory. He struck out 13 batters.

Jeff Heath's three-run homer climaxed a wild 11th inning at St. Louis in which the Browns' topped the Senators, 6 to 3. Washington broke a 2-all tie with a run in the 11th and St. Louis tied it at 3-all before Heath delivered his game-winning smash. Vern Stephens and Chet Laabs also hit Brown homers. The Athletics put on one of their rare hitting displays to top the White Sox, 9 to 2 at Chicago. Sam Chapman hit a three run homer in a big six run seventh inning. The A's made 14 hits.

The Giants evened the count in their hard-fought series with the Cubs at New York, winning 3 to 2 in the ninth when Johnny Mize doubled and Goodwin Rosen punched a single past first base for the deciding run off Bill Chipman, the relief hurler who had beaten them in 11 innings on Monday.

Lyn Rowe, one of the great comeback stars of 1946, scored his 11th victory and his fourth in a row for the Phils by beating Cincinnati, 8 to 4 at Philadelphia. In order to win he had to stop the six-game victory streak of another comeback star, lefty Johnny VanderMeer. Catcher Andy Seminick with three singles and a three run homer was the Phils' batting star.

Pittsburgh at Boston was rained out.

DETROIT MAY GET TITLE BOUT

Jacobs Seeking Permission From Louis, Mauriello To Shift Fight

NEW YORK, July 31—Promoter Mike Jacobs awaited word from Champion Joe Louis and challenger Tami Mauriello today on a proposal to shift the scene of their forthcoming heavyweight title bout from New York's Yankee stadium to a site in Detroit.

Jacobs said boxing commissioner John Hettche of Michigan called him asking that the fight be shifted to Detroit, home town of Louis, for a night sometime in September.

He told Hettche that since both fighters were signed for the Sept. 18 appearance here, he would have to get their consent before he could give any definite answer. It was pointed out that such a transfer would relieve Jacobs of the pressure of title fights crowding the September calendar for New York. In addition to the scheduled Louis-Mauriello match, welterweight champion Marty Servo meets Sugar Ray Robinson on Sept. 6 and middle-weight title holder Tony Zale opposes Rocky Graziano on Sept. 27.

Mauriello, now in preliminary training at Neptune, N. J., was expected to give his decision shortly and Louis will be contacted as soon as he arrives in New York late this week to open a new Harlem restaurant, Jacobs said.

If the bout is held in Detroit it will be only the third time in his many title defenses that Louis has fought in his home town since taking over the crown. He won from Bob Pastor there in 1939 and from Abe Simon in 1941.

DODGERS OVER MILLION MARK IN ATTENDANCE

NEW YORK, July 31—The Brooklyn Dodgers, with 32 more home games to go, were already past the million mark in attendance today and appeared virtually certain to break the all-time season mark of 1,214,910 for Ebbets Field when they won the pennant in 1941.

The Dodgers, third major league club to go over a million, came through last night when a capacity crowd of 31,446 saw them defeat the second place Cardinals, 2 to 1. That brought the season total to 1,022,400 for 45 games to date.

It was the sixth time that the Dodgers with one of the smallest parks in the majors had hit the million mark for a season. They have averaged better than 20,000 fans per game to date and need only a 7,000 average here out to top the 1941 level.

COUNTER DOUBLE CROSS CHARGED ON RACE TRACK

MIAMI, Fla., July 31—A "counter-double cross" in an allegedly fixed horse race at Tropical Park last April 17 left turf fans wondering today just who got hurt.

Three jockeys, charged with "conniving and conspiring" to fix the horse race, were suspended—perhaps permanently—from the Florida turf despite the fact that one of them, Robert Keane, insisted that he went honest at the last minute and rode his mount to victory.

The horse, Old Mexico, paid off a fat $21.50 to win, whereas the horse which allegedly was supposed to have won, Lady Cavite, would have paid but $10 had the plot worked.

The complaint against the riders was made by John Madala of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective association, who appeared before the state racing commission to present evidence yesterday.

The commission ordered the jockeys, Keane, Leonard Loveridge, and Vincent Nodarse to appear for a hearing on Sept. 17 and show cause why they should not be ruled off the turf permanently in Florida.

James Marcum, a jockey valet, was cited by Madala as the go-between in the attempted "fix" which backfired when Keane brought in Old Mexico some four lengths ahead of Lady Cavite, ridden by Nodarse.

ATOMS AND MEALS

THE era of atomic energy may provide a shorter work week and younger retirement age for workers, but the housewife had better not count on entire freedom from household cares, says Dr. Joseph Valasek, professor of physics at the University of Minnesota. Families will still eat three times a day, he warns women, and children will grow up no faster, atoms or no atoms.

There may, however, be more household help than before, human as well as electrical, Dr. Valasek believes, because industry may require fewer workers. Advances in the use of electricity have already served to lighten many household tasks, notably washing, ironing and cleaning. Further advances may be counted on to help still more.

On the whole, a time is coming when there may be less hard labor required in the household as well as in industry. This larger leisure, says Dr. Valasek, calls for better and broader education which will give more variety and mental and spiritual growth in the uses of leisure.

One of the troubles with modern American civilization is that women, rather suddenly freed from many of the older tasks requiring interest and craftsmanship, have had no better use for their released time and energy than card-playing and movies. Both have their values as recreation, but they are far from being the end of life. The fine sewing of the past had artistic values, now largely lost. Good reading and family music are not to be despised. Along with the development of the greater natural energies, new means need to be found for developing the intellectual and artistic powers in keeping with the new era.

A horseshoe table has been made especially for the United Nations meeting in September. Theory is that it will be a cozier arrangement for the delegates to face each other than to stare at the audience. If the curve of a table will help international relations, maybe what we need is more furniture designers.

Through railroad service from New York to Mexico City has begun. This should bring the two countries closer together and be a harbinger of the day when through trains will take the traveler from New York to Cape Horn.

So the passage of the retroactive grain bonus was all a big mistake. There's no telling what the Senate may say "yes" to next.

Capital News...By Frederick C. Othman

WASHINGTON, July 31—The $7,152-a-year president of the U. S. Spruce Corp., organized by the government in 1918 to buy lumber for planes in the first world war, still rides to work (work, he says) in a federal automobile driven by an $1,800-a-year federal chauffeur.

No airplane ever was built of the corporation's spruce for which congress originally spent $23,500,000. Each Spruce since 1922 congress has been appropriating $10,000 to liquidate its lumber company. Only somehow it never got liquidated. It's still chopping down trees, hauling 'em over its private railroad in northern Washington and carving 'em into planks in its own sawmills.

This story never could have been printed had it not been for a bright-eyed, 10-year-old youngster, named Walt Norblad, who lived in the tall tree country and who was properly impressed in August of 1918 when the government's spruce corporation took over thousands of acres of timber to help beat the huns. Three months later the war ended, but the Spruce Corp., didn't. Young Walt forgot about it. He completed his education, grew into manhood, married, and finally, 28 years later, gained high office.

And here was Walt, now congressman Walter Norblad of Oregon, thumbing through the 1947 federal budget and marveling at its weight, like an unabridged dictionary. In the fine print he happened to spy the 24th appropriation for the closing down of the government's spruce company. His memory, as the prosecuting attorneys say, was refreshed.

"What happened was that congress just overlooked its own corporation," he said. "And the corporation just went right along. What's worrying me now is this: If we can't get rid of a World War I lumber company in 28 years, then what's going to happen to our billion dollar World War II corporations? They'll still be with us, when my grandchildren are old, white-whiskered men."

Word of Rep Norblad's discovery in the budget's plea reached the Portland, Ore., headquarters of the Spruce Corp., where President A. R. Stallings, a retired Army colonel, retorted that the company had broken even in the lumber business all through the years it was supposed to be closing down.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, July 31—Talking motion pictures will be 20 years old on Aug. 6. It was on that date in 1926 that Warner Brothers first gave their new creation to the public at the old Warner theater on Broadway.

The program didn't consist of a talking picture as we know it today, of course. The feature was "Don Juan," starring the late John Barrymore. This had been made as a silent film, but Warners held it up for synchronization of a score played by a symphonic orchestra. There was no talking in the picture. But for the premiere Warners also prepared with the new vitaphone process a series of shorts in which famous stars of the music world did their specialties with sound and in which Will Hays, then head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, talked.

It's difficult now to realize what a revolutionary thing that premiere was for the entertainment world. Actually it was a life and death matter for Warners because of financial risk involved.

Not many people recall—if they ever really knew—that that pioneer effort was an eastern and not a Hollywood product. In fact at that time there was still a fair amount of movie production being done around New York. Paramount was running its studio out at Astoria on Long Island and Warners had the Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn, in addition to its Hollywood layout.

It was in this Brooklyn studio that the groundwork for the talkies' debut was laid under the direction of the late Sam Warner, who had become interested in Western Electric's laboratory work on talkies. Other picture companies had shied away at the risk and effort involved in making commercial use of the new medium. Warner and his assistants labored for 10 months in the Brooklyn studio before their job was completed.

The Vitaphone studio is now the site of Warner Brothers laboratories. A number of employees at the studio when the experimental work was done still work at the laboratories, including Joseph Spray, John Condon and Blanche Schneider. The musical shorts for that first program were not made in Brooklyn but in the Manhattan opera house because it had facilities for a large orchestra. Among the stars who made that first vitaphone entertainment were singers Anna Case, Marian Talley, Giovanni Martinelli, pianist Harold Bauer, violinist Efram Zimbalist and Mischa Elman and Roy Smeck, banjoist.

AMERICAN TASTE

"ANNA and the King of Siam" is to be filmed. This story of an English schoolmarm hired to teach a barbaric king's children and managing to reform many national evils at the same time, was a best seller of a year or two ago. No prophet would have picked this revival of an old-time biography as likely to attract more than a few readers. Now the judgment of Hollywood is that it will please millions.

American popular taste is unpredictable, but generally much better than the gloomcasters admit.

"I should think he would break even," exclaimed Rep. Norblad.

"I am informed that this government corporation operated on a government basis, paying no taxes on its stands of timber for nearly three decades, running its railroad tax free, and even paying no taxes on its sawmills."

So the general accounting office wrote a letter to the comptroller general, saying the time seemed to have come, all right, for the end of the U. S. Spruce Corp. The letter listed the wages of President Stallings and the other officers of the firm and mentioned the chauffeur.

This worthy's principal job, the federal accountant said, was driving Stallings to his office in a motor car owned by congress's corporation.

Congress still didn't end the spruce company; just ordered it turned over to the Army by the end of this year. If it's around next year, Rep. Norblad said, he'll demand a year-by-year accounting of its 28-year battle to win the first world war. If that doesn't work, Rep. Norblad is a handy man with an axe.

An Effective Treatment for A Special Type of "Itch"

By HERMAN N. RUNDSEEN, M.D.

ITCHING about the lower opening of the bowel or pruritus ani, as it is also called, is a common affliction and it is the more to be dreaded in that it is inclined to resist most forms of treatment with a good deal of stubbornness.

Thus, a recent article written by Dr. Laurence G. Bodkin of Brooklyn may be of interest to those suffering from this trouble because he has outlined a treatment which he has found most effective.

To begin with, the patient is told not to use soap around the opening of the bowel for a period of weeks. The area is cleansed when necessary only with a bland oil on a piece of cotton. The underclothing is laundered with a mild fine soap.

Digestive Substance

The patients treated were given a preparation to take by mouth, which contained a digestive substance known as taka diastase and atropine and phenobarbital. The digestive ferment aided in the digestion of starchy foods eaten. The phenobarbital is a mild sedative or quieting drug while the atropine helps to stop spasms of the bowel.

In addition, the patients were given a drug known as diphenyl hydantoin four times a day. The drug was taken regularly until improvement was noted and then the dosage was gradually decreased.

It was found that with this treatment, even in patients who had had the itching for a long period of time, relief was obtained in a few days, and within a week most patients reported that itching occurred only after each emptying of the bowels. It was noted that the cracking and redness of the skin around the bowel was less evident. At this point of the procedure the cracked skin was treated with a silver nitrate solution.

Drugs Not Used

When the drugs mentioned above were not used the patients did not show any marked degree of benefit. More than 40 patients were treated in this way, and they had had the symptoms varying from one to thirty years.

In addition to the things mentioned, the patients were advised to avoid the use of alcoholic beverages, spices and fried foods, since these substances might help make the itching worse. It was also found that those who suffered from constipation recovered more slowly than the other patients.

It would not appear that this form of treatment is difficult to carry out but, of course, it must be handled by a doctor.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

ALIDA HAYWORTH'S party was in full and noisy swing when Flo got there. Pausing at the door, she had a swift inclination to turn around and go away. But no, you couldn't . . . You couldn't cut off from all this by turning your back!

Alida rushed up to her. "Darling! I thought you'd forgotten! Now I believe you came late just so we'd all look at you! You are positively stunning!"

Cole Giddings appeared at Flo's elbow with a cocktail. Alida giggled. "Sweet of you, Cole! Take care of Flo, will you?" Then with an arch look she turned her back on them.

"Charmed—" said Cole, so low that only Flo heard it. As he gave her the glass his fingers lingered on hers. "I only came to this hideous jamboree to see you, my darling!"

"Scarcely worth it," said Flo, coldly.

He had no opportunity to answer that. Others detached themselves from the general melee to come and greet Flo. Cole was shouldered out of the circle.

It was like all of Alida's gatherings—too many milling around in the room for comfort, everyone talking at the same time, and voices and laughter pitched to a shrill crescendo.

It was in this way Flo had met the most of these young men and women who gathered around her now. Bill Kingley had said, one day, "Do you know Alida Hayworth? No? Well, I'm going there this afternoon for cocktails . . . come along with me! She's that kind!"

Flo had gone with him. It was at the beginning of her revolt against her role of Douglas Cooley's wife and she welcomed the change from Doug's friends to this younger, irresponsible, fast-living crowd that Alida had built up. She immediately had become one of it.

Joining it this afternoon she felt the same escape she had enjoyed that first day. Her depression vanished. A second cocktail gave her a heady confidence in herself. She held her little circle around her by every provocative wile she knew.

She saw Cole standing apart, watching her, a dark look on his face and she threw him a gay smile, lifted her glass to him.

She was aware of a woman watching her, too. Like Cole, she stood withdrawn from the others. She wore a blue linen suit that badly needed pressing and a shapeless hat of faded felt clapped carelessly on her head, and this odd attire caught Flo's curiosity as much as the intent way the woman was watching her. There were always strangers at Alida's parties, but this one was somehow different.

Alida's man came to the door with a tray of fresh canapés. Cole Giddings took advantage of the general rush at them to pull Flo aside. "Haven't I been in the doghouse long enough? I've been wretched. If I was rude at your dinner I ask a thousand pardons."

He pitched his voice to almost a whisper, yet threw deep feeling into it and his dark eyes pleaded, too. His hand closed over her arm. Why not, thought Flo. Perhaps there couldn't be anything straight-forward and decent in her life! She met his look. "Don't apologize. Cole. That dinner was an awful bore. . . . I want to forget everything about it!"

"And forgive?"

"Yes . . . forgive."

"Tomorrow, if I phone . . . will you drive out to Hideaway with me?"

Flo hesitated, and while she did a voice spoke to her from the shoulder. "You're Mary Patten's daughter, someone told me."

Flo turned to see the stranger in the blue linen suit smiling at her.

"I'm Neil Winslow."

"Oh!" exclaimed Flo, her face lighting with interest. "I'm awfully pleased to meet you!"

Neil Winslow put out her hand. "I've been hoping to meet you. A bit of luck that I came along with Cole today."

"With Cole?" repeated Flo, surprised, turning to Cole who stood frowning into his cocktail glass.

"We're old buddies," explained Neil Winslow. "We've starved together a good many times. I didn't know he was in Stanton until I ran into him on the street this afternoon."

She studied Flo's face as she spoke. She gave a little nod of her head, in agreement with some thought of her own. She flashed Cole an amused, tolerant look as if he were a bad-mannered boy, standing there, sulking. "I'm going in just one minute! Mrs. Cooley, will you have luncheon with me, or tea, or something tomorrow? I prefer the latter. . . . I'm only a working machine until mid-afternoon. Say, quarter of five."

"Sorry, but Mrs. Cooley has just made other plans for tomorrow."

"I'll phone her," agreed Cole.

Though some of Alida's guests reluctantly departed, most stayed on. At 8 o'clock Flo called Anna on the telephone and told her not to wait dinner for her.

Alida's little French clock had long since chimed nine when Flo remembered she had told Doug she would go with him to the private opening of an exhibit at the Art Gallery. She went to the telephone again.

"Mr. Cooley's gone, Mrs. Cooley," said Anna.

Flo put the receiver back in its cradle slowly. Doug had looked so pleased when she said she would go. She could, at least, have done that much.

afternoon," put in Cole smoothly.

"Oh, have I?" laughed Flo. She turned a shoulder to him. "I'd love to come, Miss Winslow."

"Good. At the Warwick. That's where I'm stopping. I'll run along now. . . . I only waited to speak to you. If our hostess remembers I was here, tell her the pretties for me!" She patted Flo's hand, turned to Cole. "Don't think you must come with me, darling! I can find my way alone!" She left them then.

Cole muttered something under his breath. But Flo, with her first warm interest, watched Neil Winslow work her way to the door. "She doesn't look a bit like a successful writer, does she? And wasn't her last book a best-seller?"

"Through very clever over-advertising."

Flo laughed up at him. "Jealous?"

"Of the blige she writes?" Cole gave his scorn a lofty note. "Nothing creative in it! She picks off her material as a vulture cleans bones."

"She's here, doing a story of my mother."

"And you'll see. . . . She'll pick all she can out of my tomorrow."

"But I liked that last book of hers," persisted Flo. "Perhaps it's just as great a talent, to be able to make good stories out of real people's lives."

Cole shrugged his shoulders to dismiss the subject of Neil Winslow's work. "Why I asked you to go out to Hideaway. . . . I've begun a play and I wanted to read to you what I've done on it. . . . I'd like your criticism on the way I'm developing it."

Flo was surprised and flattered and a little excited. "We could go some other day, Cole."

"I'll phone," agreed Cole.

Though some of Alida's guests reluctantly departed, most stayed on. At 8 o'clock Flo called Anna on the telephone and told her not to wait dinner for her.

LUBRICATION FOR SUN-DRIED HAIR

By HELEN FOLLET

Bask in the sunshine, little one. The golden rays will put ginger in your system. But, as the summer advances, be watchful of your complexion and hair. Too much tanning is not good for your pretty map. It will make the skin coarse of texture.

Nature thickens it to protect it against excessive exposure. Also it is possible to get one's tresses sun-burned, a state of affairs that may make the glorious that a bit plebeian. Who wants that to happen, for mercy's sake?

Blonde Hair

Blonde hair, after long exposure to strong sunlight, may take on a rusty cast, as if the gold were getting tarnished. There may appear a few bronze streaks on the crown of the head, that will not add to a girl's happiness or make her feel like yodeling with joy when she looks in the mirror.

Brown hair will take on auburn glints. Some girls like that. The trouble is that when the sun does a hair-dyeing job, the results are not uniform.

Sore Trial

Frosted locks may turn yellow. That sort of thing is a sore trial to the white-headed sisters. It takes many bluing rinses to remove the yellow streaks.

Like the skin, the hair is reconditioned by the free use of lubricants. If you are an outdoor baby, give yourself a hot oil treatment twice a month. Good for the scalp, a tonic for hirsute spinach. Give yourself this treatment the night before the shampoo. To be really effective, oil should stay on for eight to ten hours.

Begin with a vigorous brushing. Take the hair, strand by strand, holding it away from the head. Groom briskly with a rolling movement of the brush.

Heat some mineral oil, trickling

it along various partings. Put some on the ends of the hair that are drier than the growth close to the scalp. Spread fingers and thumbs over the scalp, give the flesh a rousing drubbing. Then to bed and sleep.

Household Hints

An electric fan is useful to dry your liquid stockings. While smoothing the film on the legs, let the direct breezes from a fan speed the drying process.

Brass or other metal door-knockers should be waxed immediately after polishing to keep them bright.

Make sure frayed lamp base cords are replaced with new, and insulation is in good condition. The home by frayed cords at the lamp base.

LUBRICATION FOR SUN-DRIED HAIR

By HELEN FOLLET

Bask in the sunshine, little one. The golden rays will put ginger in your system. But, as the summer advances, be watchful of your complexion and hair. Too much tanning is not good for your pretty map. It will make the skin coarse of texture.

Nature thickens it to protect it against excessive exposure. Also it is possible to get one's tresses sun-burned, a state of affairs that may make the glorious tangle a bit piebald. Who wants that to happen, for mercy's sake?

Blonde Hair

Blonde hair, after long exposure to strong sunlight, may take on a rusty cast, as if the gold were getting tarnished. There may appear a few bronze streaks on the crown of the head, that will not add to a girl's happiness or make her feel like yodeling with joy when she looks in the mirror.

Brown hair will take on auburn glints. Some girls like that. The trouble is that when the sun does a hair-dyeing job, the results are not uniform.

Sore Trial

Frosted locks may turn yellow. That sort of thing is a sore trial to the white-headed sisters. It takes many blueing rinses to remove the yellow streaks.

Like the skin, the hair is reconditioned by the free use of lubricants. If you are an outdoor baby, give yourself a hot oil treatment twice a month. Good for the scalp, a tonic for hirsute spinach.

Give yourself this treatment the night before the shampoo. To be really effective, oil should stay on for eight to ten hours.

Begin with a vigorous brushing. Take the hair, strand by strand, holding it away from the head. Groom briskly with a rolling movement of the brush.

Heat some mineral oil, trickling

it along various partings. Put some on the ends of the hair that are drier than the growth close to the scalp. Spread fingers and thumbs over the scalp, give the flesh a rousing drubbing. Then to bed and sleep.

CHAPTER TWENTY
NEIL WINSLOW met Flo in the lobby of the Warwick with the same hearty handclasp she had given her the afternoon before.

"Shall we go up to my room? We can talk more comfortably there than in the cocktail lounge. Wait . . . I'll order something up. What'll it be? Dry Martini?"

"No!" Flo gave it emphasis. "Not after yesterday! I'd rather have coffee, I think, Fred."

When they went up to Neil Winslow's room, she looked around it with a lively curiosity, expecting to see it different. But except for the papers scattered over the small desk and an untidy bureau, it had the impersonal look of every hotel room.

"Sit here," Mrs. Cooley. First thing—may I call you Flo? Do you mind if I clean up a bit? I came in only a few minutes before you."

Neil went to the bureau and began to rub cream into her face vigorously, continuing to talk as she did so. "You look so cool! I've always envied women who can keep their look . . . Cigarettes are in that box there on the table—help yourself. What a day! I've been in your library most of it, researching on Midland, Ohio. Actually, a trip to the spot couldn't have been hotter! Some benevolent and rich old citizen should air-condition it as a memorial. Know any such?"

Flo laughed. "Well, there's James Mum—my mother's boss. He has the money but I'm not certain of the benevolence. . . ."

She had taken a cigarette; she relaxed with it in her chair, in a lighter mood than she had known for a long time.

"I'll have to take that idea up with your mother. She's pretty close to him, isn't she?" Neil sat down in a chair opposite Flo's.

"Have you ever been to Midland?"

The picking's begun, thought Flo swiftly. But she was only amused. And liked the completely frank way Neil Winslow went at it.

"Just once. When I was six years old."

"You don't remember your grandfather?"

"I never saw him. It was his funeral we went to."

Neil Winslow reached for the box on the table, took out a cigarette. She smiled at Flo over the flame she struck for it. "You'll think I invited you here just to pump you! And I probably will! But I really do want to know you. . . ."

I watched you yesterday for quite awhile before I spoke to you and—well, I liked you. I'm not often disappointed in my first impressions."

"I hope you're not this time," said Flo, flushing a little with pleasure. "And remember how quickly I said I'd come!"

"Despite Cole. . . . Seemed to me he used rather a proprietary manner. Hope I'm not offending you!" Neil smiled, but her eyes on Flo were keenly observing.

"Not in the least," said Flo quickly. "I'm only known him a few weeks. He has no reason to speak—as if he owned me!"

"It's a way of his," laughed Neil Winslow. She added then, "He can be charming when he wants to be! Good company, too."

Flo remembered what Neil had said yesterday of "starving" with Cole. It suggested some intimacy between them in the past; her tone now was affectionately reminiscent.

part of last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Skinner and family.

Mr. and Mrs. George Clements and son Warren of Dayton were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Clements.

Charles Mills Jr., S. 2 C, and Gene Donohoe, S. 2 C of Great Lakes, Illinois arrived Saturday evening for a ten day leave with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. George Donohoe.

Mr. Charles Drake and daughter Marilyn were Monday shopping visitors in Columbus.

Misses Kathleen and Jeanie Armentrout are making a two weeks visit with their brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Zimmerman of Clyde.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sheppard of Mt. Sterling were Tuesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Binns.

Misses Juanita and Addie Ruth Skinner of Millersport were guests

Flo wished she would say more. But Neil Winslow said, with some abruptness, "This story I'm doing of your mother—I'll admit to you, I'm in a blind spot! You see, I started out to make her a glamorous character; a torchbearer, showing the way to other women. Sorry, I know, but that kind of thing goes with the mass mind better than a long story of frustrations. Well, it was going all right until suddenly it came over me that I was feeling sorry for her!"

"Sorry for my mother?" Flo cried it incredulously.

Neil Winslow blew a ring of smoke, followed it with her eyes. "Yes. Though I haven't figured out just why. Don't look so shocked!"

"I'm not shocked," said Flo. Then she said, "I don't think my mother's ever been really happy."

She stopped, surprised by her own words, for not to her knowledge had she ever before had a thought concerning her mother's happiness. It was as if Neil Winslow's directness opened doors in her own understanding.

"Well, why not?" demanded Neil, her brow creasing. "Anyone'd say she had all it takes to be happy!"

"I don't know. I don't know my mother very well."

Neil Winslow smiled, reached for a fresh cigarette, lit it from the old one. "You're like your mother—the frank way you said that! And what you said makes an interesting situation. Mind if I go into it? I'd have thought that you, the older daughter, would have been closer to your mother, especially after your father died and she came here to Stanton."

"No. It was always Charlie," Flo said calmly. "Even when I was little I knew she did not love me as she loved Charlie."

She had forgotten that old conviction. Dragged up now out of the past, it sounded embarrassingly like a bid for sympathy.

But Neil Winslow offered no sympathy. "Of course Charlie was the baby," she gave her quick, deep-throated laugh. "Here I go! And don't answer me if you don't want to. Were you hurt? Deep inside you, the way a child suffers?"

Flo was silent, thinking back. Then she shook her head. "No, I don't remember ever feeling anything about it."

"Perhaps I wouldn't let myself—couldn't

CHAPTER TWENTY
NEIL WINSLOW met Flo in the lobby of the Warwick with the same hearty handclasp she had given her the afternoon before.

"Shall we go up to my room? We can talk more comfortably there than in the cocktail lounge. Wait . . . I'll order something sent up. What'll it be? Dry Martini?"

"No!" Flo gave it emphasis. "Not after yesterday! I'd rather have coffee, I think I need."

When they went up to Neil Winslow's room, she looked around it with a lively curiosity, expecting to see it different. But except for the papers scattered over the small desk and an untidy bureau, it had the impersonal look of every hotel room.

"Sit here, Mrs. Cooley. First thing—may I call you Flo? Do you mind if I clean up a bit? I came in only a few minutes before you. Neil went to the bureau and began to rub cream into her face vigorously, continuing to talk as she did so. "You look so cool! I've always envied women who can keep that look. . . Cigarettes are in that box there on the table—help yourself. What a day! I've been in your library most of it, researching on Midland, Ohio. Actually, a trip to the spot couldn't have been hotter! Some benevolent and rich old citizen should air-condition it as a memorial. Know any such?"

Flo laughed. "Well, there's James Mull—my mother's boss. He has the money but I'm not certain of the benevolence. . ."

She had taken a cigarette; she relaxed with it in her chair, in a lighter mood than she had known for a long time.

"I'll have to take that idea up with your mother. She's pretty close to him, isn't she? Neil sat down in a chair opposite Flo's.

"Have you ever been to Midland?"

"You don't remember your grandfather?"

"I never saw him. It was his funeral we went to."

Neil Winslow reached for the box on the table, took out a cigarette. She smiled at Flo over the flame she struck for it. "You'll think I invited you here just to pump you! And I probably will! But I really do want to know you. . . I watched you yesterday for quite awhile before I spoke to you and, well, I liked you. I'm not often disappointed in my first impressions!"

"I hope you're not this time," said Flo, flushing a little with pleasure. "And remember how quickly I said I'd come."

"Despite Cole. . . Seemed to me he used rather a proprietary manner. Hope I'm not offending you?" Neil smiled, but her eyes on Flo were keenly observing.

"Not in the least," said Flo quickly. "I've only known him a few weeks. He has no reason to speak—as if he owned me!"

"It's a way of his," laughed Neil Winslow. She added then, "He can be charming when he wants to be. Good company, too."

Flo remembered what Neil had said yesterday of "starving" with Cole. It suggested some intimacy between them in the past; her tone now was affectionately reminiscent.

part of last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Skinner and family.

Miss Maxine Huffman of Dayton was the weekend guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Huffman. Miss Huffman has just returned from a two weeks vacation, which she enjoyed at Sault Point, Lake Superior, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. John Farmer Jr. joined a group from Wilmington Saturday, and spent the day at Coney Island.

Miss Olla Mallow of Greenfield visited Tuesday afternoon at the home of Miss Ruth Crabb of New Holland, and Mrs. Willard Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sheppard of Mt. Sterling were Tuesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Binns.

Misses Juanita and Addie Ruth Skinner of Millersport were guests

Flo wished she would say more.

But Neil Winslow said, with some abruptness, "This story I'm doing of your mother—I'll admit to you, I'm in a blind spot! You see, I started out to make her a glamorous character; a torchbearer showing the way to other women. Corry I know, but that kind of thing goes with the mass mind better than a long story of frustrations. Well, it was going all right until suddenly it came over me that I was feeling sorry for her!"

"Sorry for my mother?" Flo cried it incredulously.

Neil Winslow blew a ring of smoke, followed it with her eyes. "Yes, though I haven't figured out just why. Don't look so shocked!"

"I'm not shocked," said Flo. Then she said, "I don't think my mother's ever been really happy."

She stopped, surprised by her own words, for not to her knowledge had she ever before had a thought concerning her mother's happiness. It was as if Neil Winslow's directness opened doors in her own understanding.

"Well, why not?" demanded Neil, her brow creasing. "Anyone's say she had all it takes to be happy?"

"I don't know. I don't know my mother very well."

Neil Winslow smiled, reached for a fresh cigarette, lit it from the old one. "You're like your mother—the frank way you said that! And what you said makes an interesting situation. Mind if I go into it? I'd have thought that you, the older daughter, would have been closer to your mother, especially after your father died and she came here to Stanton."

"No. It was always Charlie," Flo said it calmly. "Even when I was little I knew she did not love me as she loved Charlie."

She had forgotten that old conviction. Dragged up now out of the past, it sounded embarrassingly like a bid for sympathy.

But Neil Winslow offered no sympathy. "Of course Charlie was the baby," she gave her quick, deep-throated laugh. "Here I go! And don't answer me if you don't want to. Were you hurt? Deep inside you, the way a child suffers?"

Flo was silent, thinking back. Then she shook her head. "No, I don't remember ever feeling anything about it." She added, "Perhaps I wouldn't let myself—couldn't even a child build defenses against hurt?"

"I suppose so." And now the older woman's eyes held some compassion.

A knock sounded on the door. Without stirring from her chair, Neil Winslow called, "Come in," and a waiter appeared with their coffee.

Flo was glad of the interruption, for she was beginning to feel a little like a guinea pig on a dissecting table. To her relief, Neil did not return to her questioning. As they drank their coffee she talked of her recent week in New York, the hours she had quarreled with Guy Halle who was writing her "Joyful Fields" into a play and changing every character in the process.

"Cole Giddings could do it far better! But, on principle, he despises everything I write. He knows that, so she said nothing."

Neil went on, almost gloomily. "Cole is good! But he's so afraid of failure that he won't risk it. He'd rather be here, directing debbies, than taking his chances on Broadway."

Mr. and Mrs. George Clements and son Warren of Dayton were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Clements.

Charles Mills Jr., S. 2/C, and Gene Donohoe, S. 2/C of Great Lakes, Illinois arrived Saturday evening for a ten day leave with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. George Donohoe.

Mrs. Charles Drake and daughter Marilyn were Monday shopping visitors in Columbus.

Misses Kathleen and Jeanie Armentrout are making a two weeks visit with their brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Zimmerman of Clyde.

Mrs. Margaret James of Springfield was the guest last week at way. . . .

"He's begun writing a play," said Flo quickly, and then flushed a little because she had flown so to Cole Giddings' defense.

"He's often beginning," commented Neil Winslow, shortly. "But will he finish?"

"She was in love with him," thought Flo. And she saw it a wasted affection, for it was difficult to think of Cole looking twice at this plain-faced, almost dowdy woman!

She started, then, for Neil spoke as if she were answering these thoughts. "I was very fond of Cole, once. I knew all his weaknesses, but I was fond of him just the same. I could have made something of him. But I didn't have the 'oomph' or whatever. He likes his women pretty. . . it soothes his inferiority complex."

Wednesday at 9:30 p. m., EST, over CBS. Pretty vocalist Kitty Kallen sings "Easy to Love" and baritone Curt Massey has the immortal "Night and Day" for his solo. The orchestra plays Rose's arrangements of the Porter tunes, "Begin the Beguine," "What Is This Thing Called Love" and "I've Got You Under My Skin." Five prize winning letter writers, whose request numbers will be broadcast on the show, will be awarded David Rose autographed record albums and radio-phonograph combinations, with record players.

MUSICAL VARIETY

Sy Oliver sings his newly written lyrics to the famous instrumental "jump" creation, "Opus Number One," for the first time on the air, as Mutual invites its listeners to another of its regular weekly musical variety shows "Endorsed By Dorsey," Wednesday, (9:30 p. m., EST). The four Clark Sisters lend vocal support to Sy's "scat" rendition of this tune which he created for Tommy Dorsey's band a few years back, and also offer their interpretation of "Travelin' and "You Was So Right, Baby." Lovely Vera Holly teams with the piano guitar bass combination known as the Herman Chittison Trio, for a vocal on "It Had To Be You," followed by a solo spot on "South America Take It Away." The full band rounds out the musical offerings with a Sy Oliver styled arrangement of "In Love In Vain."

KYSER'S SUBSTITUTE

Art Linkletter, the man equipped by experience for such drop-of-the-hat assignments as welcoming a governor, dedicating a statue, or judging the tastiest plum pudding, will begin a new role Wednesday when he starts a four-week term as visiting dean of Kay Kyser's "College of Musical Knowledge" over NBC at 9 p. m., EST. The Of Professor is off on a seven-week vacation. Before he returns to classes September 18, Jack Haley and Abbott and Costello also will try their hands as "College" quizzmasters.

ELERY QUEEN

Ray Bolger, stage and screen star, will be guest armchair detective for Ellery Queen's crime case, "The Adventure of the Man Who Got Away With Murder," Wednesday, at 6:30 p. m., EST, over CBS. Bolger is currently playing the leading role in the Broadway hit musical revue, "Three To Make Ready." The tables are turned in this psychological thriller, when the killer hounds master sleuth Ellery with confessions of his crime. Queen has a strange enemy—a one-time respectable lawyer—who pins the responsibility for his career of cold-blooded murder on the master detective. To Ellery alone, this psychotic criminal admits his villainy, defying the gentleman detective to expose him.

HOLD BACK THE DAWN

Olivia De Havilland will play her original screen role with Jean Pierre Aumont as co-star in the moving and timely film drama, "Hold Back the Dawn," on the "Academy Award" program, Wednesday, at 9 p. m., EST, over CBS. This is the story of refugee-immigrants and their interminable, desperate wait in a grubby Mexican hotel for quota numbers, that mean the coveted trip over the border to the United States and the chance of a new life. "Hold Back the Dawn" received seven nominations for the "Academy Award" in 1941—the picture for best production, Miss De Havilland for best actress, and the script, by Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, of "Lost Weekend" fame, for best written screen play. The other nominations were for cinematogra-

HOLIDAY FOR MUSIC
The hit songs of Cole Porter, featured in the new film, "Night and Day," based on the songwriter's career, will be highlighted by David Rose and his orchestra on the "Holiday for Music" program, Wednesday at 9:30 p. m., EST, over CBS. Pretty vocalist Kitty Kallen sings "Easy to Love" and baritone Curt Massey has the immortal "Night and Day" for his solo. The orchestra plays Rose's arrangements of the Porter tunes, "Begin the Beguine," "What Is This Thing Called Love" and "I've Got You Under My Skin." Five prize winning letter writers, whose request numbers will be broadcast on the show, will be awarded David Rose autographed record albums and radio-phonograph combinations, with record players.

MUSICAL VARIETY
Sy Oliver sings his newly written lyrics to the famous instrumental "jump" creation, "Opus Number One," for the first time on the air, as Mutual invites its listeners to another of its regular weekly musical variety shows "Endorsed By Dorsey," Wednesday, (9-9:30 p. m., EST). The four Clark Sisters lend vocal support to Sy's "scat" rendition of this tune which he created for Tommy Dorsey's band a few years back, and also offer their interpretation of "Travelin'" and "You Was So Right, Baby." Lovely Vera Holly teams with the piano guitar bass combination known as the Herman Chittison Trio, for a vocal on "It Had To Be You," followed by a solo spot on "South America Take It Away." The full band rounds out the musical offerings with a Sy Oliver stylized arrangement of "In Love In Vain".

KYSEK'S SUBSTITUTE
Art Linkletter, the man equipped by experience for such drop-of-the-hat assignments as welcoming a governor, dedicating a statue, or judging the tastiest plum pudding, will begin a new role Wednesday when he starts a four-week term as visiting dean of Kay Kyser's "College of Musical Knowledge" over NBC at 9 p. m. EST. The Ol' Professor is off on a seven-week vacation. Before he returns to classes September 18, Jack Haley and Abbott and Costello also will try their hands as "College" quizzmasters.

ELLERY QUEEN
Ray Bolger, stage and screen star, will be guest armchair detective for Ellery Queen's crime case, "The Adventure of the Man Who Got Away With Murder," Wednesday, at 6:30 p. m., EST, over CBS. Bolger is currently playing the leading role in the Broadway hit musical revue, "Three To Make Ready." The tables are turned in this psychological thriller, when the killer hounds master sleuth Ellery with confessions of his crime. Queen has a strange enemy—a one-time respectable lawyer—who pins the responsibility for his career of cold-blooded murder on the master detective. To Ellery alone, this psychotic criminal admits his villainy, defying the gentleman detective to expose him.

HOLD BACK THE DAWN
Olivia De Havilland will play her original screen role with Jean Pierre Aumont as co-star in the moving and timely film drama, "Hold Back the Dawn," on the "Academy Award" program, Wednesday, at 9 p. m., EST, over CBS. This is the story of refugee-immigrants and their interminable, desperate wait in a grubby Mexican hotel for quota numbers, that mean the coveted trip over the border to the United States and the chance of a new life. "Hold Back the Dawn" received seven nominations for the "Academy Award" in 1941—the picture for best production, Miss De Havilland for best actress, and the script, by Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, of "Lost Weekend" fame, for best written screen play. The other nominations were for cinematogra-

JACK HEDGES IS HELPING TAKE CATTLE ABROAD

County Youth On Relief Ship Delivering Animals To War-Torn Poland

In the role of a seagoing cowboy, Jack W. Hedges, Route 4, Circleville, was aboard the S. S. William Riddle, Wednesday, helping to take 840 head of cattle to war-stricken Poland. The ship sailed July 4 from Newport News, Va., and is due to arrive soon at Danzig, Poland.

The S. S. William Riddle is one of many relief ships carrying badly needed cattle to Europe under the sponsorship of the Church of the United Brethren. Hedges is one of a crew of 33 seagoing cowboys who were recruited from three states by the United Church Service Center, New Windsor, Md.

Hedges is using the Summer months to combine a useful service to starving people and also see what war has done to Europe. He will return late in August or early in September to an undesignated American port. His duties aboard ship consist of feeding, watering, and otherwise caring for the animals bound for Europe.

He is one of about 8,000 such nautical cowboys caring for approximately 200,000 animals being shipped abroad in 1946 from a number of American ports.

Shipment of cattle is only one of many relief projects carried on at the busy church-sponsored depot at New Windsor. Not only are shoes, clothing, bedding, canned foods, money and soap received and shipped abroad, but also candles, kitchen utensils, silverware, dolls, children's books, carpenter tools, cotton feed bags, and a number of other items desperately needed in war-stricken lands. Over 700 pairs of shoes are resoled each week prior to shipment.

Almost 3,000 more men are needed to help take livestock to Europe during the remainder of 1946. Men who are interested in serving as seagoing cowboys should communicate with Benjamin Bushong, New Windsor, Md., asking for an application form. Applicants are wanted who are able and willing to care for livestock, are of good character, and who have definite interest in helping to rehabilitate Europe. A trip requires four to six weeks and $150 is paid for each trip.

ANGER LANDS AMANDA YOUTH IN HOSPITAL

That old proverb about discretion being the better part of valor apparently didn't mean so much to Walter R. Nye, Jr., 23, Amanda, who was given emergency treatment at 9:40 p. m. Tuesday in Berger hospital for a badly cut right hand and was then released. Hospital attaches said Nye became increasingly irate when his automobile resisted all of his attempts to start it. Finally, in exasperation, Nye socked the windshield a heavy blow with his fist. He was removed to the hospital in the car of Forest Hettinger, Adelphi.

NEW VOLCANO WATCHER DUE

Veteran Watcher Quits Job After 30 Years Of Quiet At Mt. Rainier

BY JAMES A. MACLEAN

United Press Staff Correspondent

ASHFORD, Wash., July 31—Residents at the foot of Mount Rainier advertised today for a new volcano watcher to replace grizzled Louis Rexroth, 50, who quit to take "a job with a future."

Rexroth, disgusted after 30 years service, resigned as watcher over the 14,408 foot slopes of long-dormant Mount Rainier because "nothing ever happens."

For 30 years, he patrolled the mountain every day, dipping his hand in the warm volcanic springs to test their heat. He kept an almost constant vigil over the three cinder cones in the mountain's crater for the first thin wisps of smoke that would herald new activity.

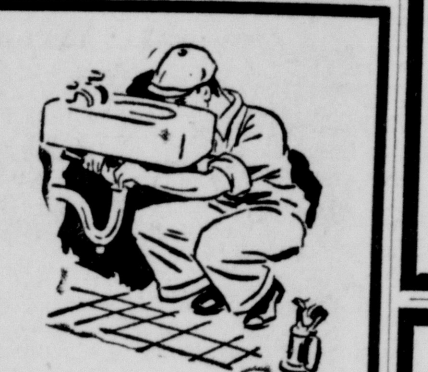

But the mountain, which last erupted in 1872, showed no signs of activity.

"Frankly, I got bored," Rexroth explained.

A possible candidate for the vacant—and unpaid—post was ostrich egg-sitter Jim Moran of Hollywood.

"That sounds like the job I've been dreaming about," said the professional screwball.

"All my life I've wanted work like that—just sitting on a hill and looking out into space," Moran said he had all the pa-

MARIETTA, O., July 31—The Mid-East Regatta, spectacle of speedy out-board motor boat racing and a mecca for daring drivers from all sections of the country, will be received here this year on the straight-away Muskingum River course.

Marietta Post No. 64, American Legion, will sponsor the program of racing on Friday, August 23 and Saturday, August 24, the first to be held since 1941 when the Regatta of many years standing was suspended until the end of war days. The two days of boat racing will climax a Victory Homecoming Week starting here Sunday, August 18.

First started in 1932 by the Marietta Kiwanis Club, the event was turned over to sponsorship of local Legionnaires in 1941. Throughout the years the annual regatta has attracted thousands of visitors to the river course and has been regarded in boat racing circles as a top-notch competitive event.

Caviezel indicated he would bring the matter before the town council if the post was not swiftly filled.
